THE AUSTRALASIAN MISSION.

Recent Return of Six Elders.—The Year has Highly Enjoyed.—Good Work Being Accomplished.

A party of six missionaries, each of whom have been laboring for upwards of three years and a half in the Australasian mission, which comprises all the districts of New Zealand and Australia, arrived in this city over the Union Pacific at 8:30 on Saturday morning.

The names of the returning Elders are as follows: Charles R. Bartlett, of Vernal; Utah county; W. F. Neeske, of Ogden; Bear Lake county; Christian Petersen, of Greenwood, Weber county; Joseph C. Jorgenson, of Logan, and Lewis G. Holland, of this city. The former left home in July, 1892, and the latter, June 20, 1893.

Accompanying the Elders was Elder Jacob C. Peterson, and family, of Carterton, New Zealand, who have emigrated for the purpose of taking up their abode in Utah, having however, never been in the United States, nor having been in the vicinity of their former home. On the voyage they had the misfortune of losing their five-month-old child.

The company came home on the new Australasian Pacific steamship line, and expect excellent service at the hands of Captain Smith and crew. After leaving Sydney and getting quite a distance out to sea, the ship, the steamship which necessitated their returning to the starting point for repairs, when delayed their arrival in this city somewhat. Another delay was caused by a heavy gale which was experienced in the vicinity of Cape Finisterre. Otherwise the trip was a highly enjoyable one.

There are present over sixty Elders in the Australasian mission, who are joined by over 100 wives, William Gardner, with many more needed. The work among the Europeans is being responded, and the Elders are meeting with unqualified success in bringing many of them to a knowledge of the gospel.

The work among the Maoris was commenced in Whakatane in 1882, and the Maori Saints now number over 1,000 souls, with independent meetings holding services throughout the entire island. A good work is being done in Tasmania, and all over the islands of the mission, where which now remains strict in the messages of the gospel, and seeds are being sown, which will bring a bountiful harvest in due season.

League Library.

The officers of the Mutual Improvement League are highly gratified at the interest manifested in the growth of the library. The publishers of the different periodicals throughout the city and State are furnishing copies, and the city and State have also made valuable contributions. The following individuals and firms have also made valuable contributions: Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Cannon, Margaret Irvin, H. H. Rasmussen, George W. Lindquist, and many more needed.
